WELCOME TO THE CONGRESSIONAL HISPANIC CAUCUS INSTITUTE 2020 HEALTH SUMMIT

Rep. Ruben Gallego
CHCI Chair

Marco A. Davis
CHCI President and CEO

Dear Friends,

Welcome to the CHCI 2020 Health Summit where we will address some of the most critical health issues and the health care of the Latino community and the nation. This unprecedented year has revealed disparities and inequities in our community, while Latinos in the U.S. continue to grow in numbers and influence. It is important for the public, private, and nonprofit sectors to think critically about addressing the health and health care needs of the Latino community, now more than 60 million strong.

At this summit, Members of Congress, thought leaders, corporate executives, healthcare advocates, and pharmaceutical, medical and health insurance experts from across the country will take part in timely discussions about health disparities, the healthcare workforce, technological advances in medicine and patient care, mental health, and the social determinants in health for children, youth, and families.

As the premier Hispanic leadership development organization in the nation's capital for more than 40 years, we have educated, empowered, and connected Latino leaders who are actively changing the economic and public policy landscape in the United States. We foster dialogues that produce solutions for the challenges we all face, and help forge a path to a stronger, united, and more just America that upholds its founding values.

All that we do stems from our commitment to developing the next generation of Latino leaders. The R2L NextGen Participants, Congressional Interns, Public Policy and Graduate Fellows, and more than 4,000 CHCI alumni we serve make an impact through the activities they carry out. Get to know some of those leaders, our CHCI Health Fellows and Interns on page 12. We are pleased to support their continued leadership development and contributions, and your participation and support is vital to our mission.

The support we receive for our events – including this Health Summit – is a vital funding source for our programs and activities. We are grateful to our sponsors for their leadership, and for everyone's support and participation, which represent an investment in the nation's future.

Sincerely,

DAY 1 TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 17

OPENING PLENARY

12:00PM – 1:30PM

Racial Justice, The State of Latino Health and What Lies Ahead

Today, the biggest threats to the health and longevity of Latinos are preventable diseases, which are crippling the community, including with the financial burden of medical bills. The root causes of many of these preventable health threats are inextricably linked to the conditions that shape peoples' opportunity to attain good physical, mental, and economic health and adopt healthy behaviors. They also include long-standing systemic racism and discrimination that have put many Latinos at increased risk of getting COVID-19, or suffering from more severe effects of it. This session will start with a discussion on the current state of Latino health in the U.S. and what lies ahead, and will be followed by a discussion on effective strategies to address systemic racism, discrimination, and bias. Experts will uncover the biggest and the unique health care challenges facing the U.S. Latino population today and outline solutions based policies and practical approaches to increase health outcomes and mitigate discrimination, bias, and racism that have perpetuated generational cycles of poor health and risky health behaviors.

CONCURRENT BREAKOUT SESSION 1

2:00PM - 3:00PM

Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion in the Healthcare Industry Workforce

Diversity, equity, and inclusion in the healthcare sector is as important to fostering innovation and boosting performance as it is in other sectors. From C-suite executives, doctors, nurses, caregivers, to IT staff, the industry has faced challenges in finding and retaining diverse talent. It is more imperative than ever that our healthcare workforce have the diversity and cultural competency to treat some of the most affected by health challenges effectively. Join this session to learn what the healthcare industry is doing to elevate Latino and other minority groups into the industry's top echelons and approaches to providing equitable and accessible healthcare for all.

2:00PM - 3:00PM

Innovation for Detecting and Treating Latino Mortality

Technological advances have the potential to improve and save the lives of Latinos through early detection and treatment of cancer and heart disease, the leading causes of death for Hispanics in the US. This session will examine how we can save lives through early adoption of safe, innovative, and effective technologies that facilitate early detection and treatment. It will also include a discussion on what policymakers can do to ensure new and safe technological innovations can be made widely available, affordable, and accessible to Latino patients who need them most.

CONCURRENT BREAKOUT SESSION 3

2:00PM - 3:00PM

Prescription Drugs: Access and Affordability for Underserved Communities

Prescription drugs can treat many previously untreatable and rare illnesses, leading to improved health and higher life expectancy. Unfortunately, while medically promising, these innovations are out of reach for many Latinos, who are likely to suffer disproportionately from health conditions such as: asthma, cancer, liver disease, tuberculosis, obesity, HIV, diabetes, and Alzheimer's disease. In the wake of several drug pricing reforms on the horizon, including recently passed legislation to lower drug prices, session speakers will discuss policy recommendations that promote innovation in the pharmaceutical industry while at the same time improving access and affordability for life-saving medications.

PLENARY

12:00PM – 1:30PM

Equitable Vaccine Development and Distribution

COVID-19 is a stark reminder of how effective vaccines can help reduce morbidity and mortality if developed in a way that meets the needs of communities of color. As we grapple with a pandemic that disproportionately impacts Latinos, we are seeing a growing anti-vaccine movement fueling the mistrust of a COVID vaccine in communities of color that could lead to disparities in COVID vaccination rates. This session will start with a discussion about the pivotal role that vaccines can play in preventing infectious diseases and mortality and will be followed by a discussion about equitable and ethical development and distribution of vaccines, clinical trials, and the lessons learned from the COVID-19 pandemic.

BREAKOUT SESSIONS

CONCURRENT BREAKOUT SESSION 1

2:00PM - 3:00PM

Addressing Mental Health and Obesity in Times of COVID-19

COVID-19 has brought with it a mental health crisis that, like so many aspects of the pandemic, will disproportionately impact Latinos and other people of color. Also, obesity puts people at risk for serious chronic diseases, and increases the risk of severe illness from COVID-19. Tune in for a two-part discussion which will include a conversation with a CHCI alum, Miguel Blancarte, on how he turned the tide against obesity and mental health, and is leading the charge to achieve health equity in the City of Chicago through community building strategies. The second part will feature a conversation with a mental health expert about ways to address mental health during COVID-19.

Maternal Health: Achieving Health Equity in the Latino Community

Latinas experience high rates of unplanned pregnancy and sexually transmitted infections, including HIV/AIDS. They also face challenges in accessing contraception that is affordable and available. And Latinas face additional obstacles including cultural and linguistic barriers, as well as hurdles based on immigration or economic status, and geographic location, which prohibit many of them from obtaining comprehensive and quality maternal health care. Join session speakers to learn about proven practices and recommended policy solutions to achieve maternal health equity for Latina mothers and prevent avoidable maternal morbidity and mortality in an era of rapid demographic and epidemiological transition.

The Future of the Affordable Care Act and its Implications for the Latino Community

According to the Kaiser Family Foundation, Latinos experienced large gains in coverage under the Affordable Care Act (ACA) that reduced disparities in healthcare coverage. The percentage of Latinos with no health insurance coverage dropped from 30% in 2010 when the ACA was enacted to 19% in 2017. However, these gains reportedly stalled or began reversing and are now at significant risk because of state and federal policies and the Trump Administration's efforts to invalidate the ACA, including a Supreme Court case currently being considered. In light of these current trends, experts will discuss the future of the ACA and its implications for the Latino community, including the potential impact of a Supreme Court decision striking down the law.

The Current Healthcare Crisis and the Role of Latinos in Shaping Healthcare Policy

Physician and former Healthcare CEO, Dr. J. Mario Molina, is the founder of voterCare.org, a platform that shares the truth about the current healthcare crisis, how to take action, and weighs in on the state of healthcare policy in the United States. Hear from Dr. Molina in this crucial conversation on engaging Latino communities on healthcare policies and his experience indirectly serving their healthcare needs. Mobilizing Latino communities is vital for the sake of our lives, our families, and our future. Be part of the conversation on the impact that record-breaking Latino voters will have on the future of healthcare.

Digital Health: Addressing the Needs of Underserved Latino Communities

Latinos represent a significant and growing segment of our nation's population. Sadly, many Latinos are caught in a cycle of vulnerability with declining access to healthcare. Although digital health is not a solution in and of itself for eliminating the systemic factors that perpetuate health disparities for underserved Latinos, it has wide-ranging potential to reduce the disparities caused by economic, social, environmental, and other factors. From the introduction of telehealth services, cloud computing, and mobile devices, to remote monitoring with peripheral devices and care management coaching, technology has the potential to transform access to healthcare and medical treatment for Latino communities. Speakers in this session will discuss proven ways of leveraging technology to connect some of the most vulnerable Latino populations to better access to healthcare.
